

Intergenerational Ecological Learning Activities:

- Create a climate justice bulletin board for kids/all ages so they can share short stories, bible verses, or facts about their community.
- Car-free or car-pool week - encourage your members to walk, bike, take transit, or car pool to church together during Lent.
- Host a local foods potluck or meal to help each other think about how far our food has to travel and use fossil fuels in the process.
- One traditional Lenten discipline is fasting, so it's a good time to give up meat or reduce meat consumption during the season. Give an explanation of how food is produced, transported and how it impacts our environment. Here are some other ways families can help learn about and tackle climate change:
<https://theconversation.com/5-ways-families-can-help-tackle-climate-change-126512>
- <https://www.unep.org/news-and-stories/story/10-ways-you-can-help-fight-climate-crisis>
- We have tended to focus a lot on recycling, but reducing and re-using our stuff is much more effective to help the environment. Consider hosting a repair workshop in your congregation.
- Host a vintage clothing exchange and talk about how much clothing gets thrown into landfills and the impact it has on our environment:
<https://www.unep.org/news-and-stories/press-release/unsustainable-fashion-and-textiles-focus-international-day-zero>